Demolition: Paving way for 'hub'

Lancashire County Council chairman Alan Whitaker, front, weighs in to help as demolition work goes ahead to pave the way for the new Nelson Community Hub, in Leeds Road, Nelson, watched by guests

Kids in M-way danger

By DAVID WATKINSON

Children are being warned about the dangers of playing on the motorway after a spate of incidents in East Lancashire.

Lancashire Police said there had been a number of reports of youngsters accessing the M65 carriageway over the weekend.

The reports were in the Blackburn area, but police said that every year they were called to cases where children were endangering their lives on the motorway.

Police said it was vital that children understood how dangerous motorways are.

In March 2007, Harrison Hartley, of Harling Street, Burnley, died after he was hit by a car on the M65. An inquest subsequently heard that the 15-year-old Hameldon Community College student was playing chicken.

PC Sam Markland said: "The motorway is an extremely dangerous place and is not safe to play on, or anywhere near. Once somebody sets foot on the fence at the side of the motorway, they are committing a criminal offence. People caught will be dealt with."

Youngsters playing with lives on M65

Over a two-week period, Lancashire Police's motorway unit have visited 11 schools in the Blackburn area to deliver a presentation to youngsters about the dangers of playing on, or near, the motorway network.

PC Markland said: "The aim of these talks is to make children aware not just of the dangers, but also the terrible consequences that their actions could have on other people.

"The presentation has so far been extremely well received and we hope that youngsters will stay well clear."

Inventors share brightest ideas

By SALLY HENFIELD

A mould to make a stove from mud and a canister for picking up after your pet were just some of the products on show at an inventors' exhibition.

Members of North West Ideas, a group where inventors share and work on their latest designs, met at Burnley's Turf Moor football ground to try to encourage more people to turn their doodles into money-making ventures.

Bathroom shop owner Carl Harrison developed his Easypost while working on his own garden.

The metal structure slots over concrete fence posts to make them higher, without having to go through the exertion and cost of digging up the old one to install a new one.

The 43-year-old, from Highercroft, Blackburn, said: "It has taken me two years from coming up with the idea to finding a supplier and has cost me about £30,000.

"It is about to be sold by the country's biggest garden website and I could recuperate my money within a year."

Francis Welch, from Barnoldswick, and John Ridehough, from Great Harwood, set up Radical Technologies a year ago.

It took former aerospace worker John, 59, less than 25 minutes to come up with the idea for the pneumatic robotic gripper and less than two days to make it.

Maurice Glynn, 70, has created the Poopsta, a canister that owners can use to collect doggy droppings in a clean and hygienic way. He hopes to develop the product by allowing customers to customise their Poopsta.

And permaculture designer Keith Thompson, 69, from Colne, hopes his design for a stove mould could help alleviate problems in the Third World.

The mould is lighter and less bulky than shipping out a conventional stove to poverty-stricken areas and is reusable.

Basil Philipz, chairman of North West Ideas, said: "After a couple of years we are really starting to see several success stories and it is very enjoyable to see ideas turn into products and go out for shipment."

Short-stay plan

Consultation has been launched over plans to change car parking at Tunstill Square, Brierfield. Pendle Council plans to designate a short-stay section. Motorists will be allowed to use the current parking disc system to stay for up to two-and-a-half hours. The remainder of the car park will allow all-day parking. The deadline for comments is April 24.

Hunt for Uni digs

By CHRIS HOPPER

University bosses are on the hunt for student digs in Burnley before a new £80million campus opens in the town.

The University of Central Lancashire (UCLan) says it wants to build up a "database of landlords" in preparation for the arrival of hundreds of higher education students in September.

Although most learners are expected to commute to and from the UCLan-Burnley College joint venture, in Princess Way, it is hoped many others will live in nearby accommodation.

However, a Burnley estate agent has criticised the idea, saying the town's housing stock is not up to scratch.

Howard Baker, Falcon & Foxglove, Manchester Road, said: "The bulk of houses in the area around the new campus are two up, two downs and I don't know how suitable they would be for students.

"Students expect a lot these days. They want better quality accommodation and it is not there at the moment, so they will have to spend money on doing them up.

"I don't think the new campus will make any dent on the Burnley market. Students would much rather live in Preston, or Manchester, and travel in."

Bosses hope the new UCLan campus will house 500 students in the next three years, and up to 1,100 eventually.

The site will complement higher education courses already offered by Burnley College and will specialise in manufacturing.

A UCLan spokesman said: "Our new Burnley campus will be providing in the region of 15 new undergraduate and postgraduate degree programmes.

"Although we expect many of the places available to be taken by local applicants, the early signs also show a strong interest from those living outside the Burnley area.

"Therefore, the university's accommodation service, based in Preston, is working closely with Burnley Council and other providers to try to identify suitable accommodation for students studying at our Burnley campus."

Buddy project boost

Young people on a Burnley estate will be taking the lead thanks to a cash injection from County Hall.

New funds totalling £1,500 have been awarded by County Coun Tony Martin for a buddy project based at Stoops and Hargher Clough Youth and Community Centre.

Coun Martin is young people's champion and Burnley Central West division member. The project aims to to give children the chance to take on responsible tasks. Buddies are aged 10 or 11, and junior leaders are 12 to 15 years old and help out adult volunteers at the Venice Street centre.

They are involved in practical tasks like taking the register, helping prepare equipment for activities, preparing snack meals, and helping clear up at the end of sessions.

With the extra funding the group can stage play and youth work training sessions for the leaders.

Summer sleep-in

A hotel in Burnley is to give guests an extra hour's kip to celebrate the arrival of British Summer Time. Clocks will go forward this Sunday. Bosses at the Holiday Inn Express, in Pendle Way, say their customers will be allowed to check out at noon, instead of 11am, in honour of the occasion.

Plots to switch

Allotments in Nelson and Colne are to be managed by town councils, instead of Liberata property services for Pendle Council, after borough councillors rubber-stamped recommendations.

Tasers agreed

Lancashire Constabulary has bid for, and received, 150 taser guns for its front-line officers. Home Secretary Jacqui Smith had made 10,000 of the stun guns available across the country.

Holiday bookings 'are safe'

By BEN BRIGGS

More than 500 people who booked holidays with Fraser Eagle will not lose any money after the collapse of the company.

The reassurance came from the Confederation of Passenger Transport, which administers the insurance scheme covering holidays booked with the troubled Padiham firm.

Since the demise of the coach firm, with the loss of 120 jobs, would-be holiday-makers had been left in the dark as to whether their package tours were still viable.

But John Major, director of communications for the CPT, said they would try to rearrange the holiday, or organise a refund.

Mr Major said: "It is very early days, but we have the names and addresses of all 500 people who have booked Fraser Eagle holidays.

"We will be writing to them and they should have received a letter by the end of this week.

"We will try and rearrange the actual holiday they have booked and if not will make sure they get all the money back which they have paid."

Fraser Eagle is covered by the bonded coach holidays scheme which the CPT administers. The scheme covers anyone who has booked a coach tour that will last more than 24 hours.

This means that in cases such as the Fraser Eagle meltdown, worried holiday-makers can reclaim their cash, or still go ahead with their holiday.

Anybody who thinks they are affected by the collapse of Fraser Eagle should ring the CPT on 0207 240 3131.

The news comes after Fraser Eagle administrators, Baker Tilly, revealed that the coach firm's managing director Kevin Dean was in negotiations to buy back part of the taxi business affected by the firm's collapse.

Tributes: Send-off as top doctor retires

Colleagues paid tribute to a retiring doctor who has been at the forefront of his field in Burnley and Pendle. Consultant community paediatrician Dr Ian Brown was given a surprise send-off by staff and patients at Reedley Hall. He is pictured being toasted by fellow paediatrician Dr Teresa Barker, as family and friends look on.

Tesco plans

Tesco bosses have lodged applications with Burnley Council planners as they prepare to open a new store in the former Co-op unit, in Sowerby Street, Padiham. They want to fit a cash machine, put up six anti-ram raid bollards, display new signs and install a new shop front.

Bus shelters delay anger

By LISA STOREY

Plans to improve bus shelters across Pendle have been delayed, prompting anger from councillors.

Lancashire County Council and Pendle Council have jointly funded recent upgrades at the bus terminals in Earby and Barnoldswick.

But councillors at the West Craven Area Committee heard almost 20 other stops along the main bus routes in West Craven would not be improved in the coming year.

Coun David Whipp said many of the bus stops missing out on funding this year were near where elderly people lived.

He said: "They have got the new 'kneeling' buses (those which give easy access) which have been in place since the start of the year, but the number of stops to be improved, including ones in Kelbrook, Earby and Barnoldswick, is a fraction of what they proposed.

DEPLORABLE: Coun David Whipp

"It really is deplorable that the scheme has been hacked in this way."

Coun Whipp added: "Many of these routes are near homes with elderly people who would benefit from the improved shelters.

"We have heard of 'mind the gap' at railway stations. We're going to have lots of gaps where the bus stops won't be improved."

A county council spokesman said: "The Quality Bus funding has so far allowed us to upgrade all bus stops between Padiham and Colne along the Mainline bus route.

"Work will shortly commence on a further 12 bus stops along the Mainline routes to Keighley, Barnoldswick and Trawden.

"The remaining bus stops along the Mainline route within Pendle will be completed during the financial year 2010/11, subject to funding approval."

Benefits from the Quality Bus scheme include new shelters featuring seating and lighting, raised kerbs and bus stop "clearways", enabling the bus to draw up level to the kerb, without hindrance from parked vehicles.

Transdev Burnley and Pendle has recently invested £3.1million in 19 new low-floor vehicles.

COMBATING EXTREMISM: Chief Supt Neil Smith joins the Ministry of Justice

New role for police chief

A chief superintendent is set to lead the fight against violent extremism after his retirement as one of East Lancashire's most senior police officers.

Neil Smith, divisional commander for Lancashire Constabulary's Pennine Division, has hung up his handcuffs and accepted an important role within Blackburn MP Jack Straw's Ministry of Justice. Mr Smith, 53, can draw on 37 years of policing experience, which has seen him work as a senior detective in Blackburn, and lead the force in Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale since 2004. It marks a new chapter for the father-of-three, who retired last Friday and says he has never regretted a day of his career since he joined the constabulary in 1972.

Back then Mr Smith rubbed shoulders with another recruit, Sir Paul Stephenson, now the Metropolitan Police commissioner, when the pair were posted to Bacup. They have kept in touch ever since. Mr Smith later spent nine years at Blackburn, moving to CID, where he was made a sergeant in 1982. After a spell in Nelson, he joined the fledgling support unit, based in Burnley, where he covered the miners' strike and Toxteth Riots.

Jobs in the drugs squad and major crimes unit were followed by an inspector's job at Rawtenstall in 1994, from where he became a detective inspector for Lancaster and Morecambe, then chief inspector at Blackburn. Later he became a detective chief inspector there.

Mr Smith went to Pennine Division, first as operations manager then divisional commander, in the wake of the Burnley Riots.

Since then he has worked tirelessly to build bridges between different communities, a role he will continue with the Justice Ministry in the future.

He said: "I genuinely pay tribute to the officers and support staff within this organisation, who do a very demanding job, dealing with difficult people in a variety of difficult situations."

His father, Jack, was a village bobby in Hertfordshire, his wife Susan is an Accrington-based detective, and his 26-year-old daughter, Sarah, works in the division's public protection unit.

Mr Smith added: "Five years ago, Burnley was not seen in a good light. There was still a lot of talk about the disturbances and all the things that had gone wrong. I think since then Burnley is now seen, in police terms, as a place where we perform well across a number of different areas."

POPULAR: The 'Singing Ringing Tree' at Crown Point, Burnley

Tree-mendous hit on YouTube

By KATE TURNER

Video footage of a Burnley landmark has become a worldwide success after notching up more than a million hits on YouTube.

The eye-catching 'Singing Ringing Tree', at Crown Point, Burnley, has gained global fame after being put on the popular internet video site back in 2007.

The sculpture, made from recycled scaffolding pipes which make sounds as the wind blows across them, was designed by Tonki Lui ltd, of London, and built in 2006.

Video site YouTube has 12 videos of the tree clocking up a total of over 1.1million viewers, with one video showing panoramic views of the area and the musical sculpture making its intriguing ringing sound, attracting 938,744 viewers.

It was built by Mid Pennine Arts in partnership with Burnley Council.

Boxing's still my first love

It seems like boxing has been in the doldrums for a while. Are there still plenty of reasons to be excited by the sport?
Absolutely. You just have to feel the buzz that accompanied the build-up to the Amir Khan and Marco Antonio Barrera fight to realise people are still in love with boxing.

From today's crop of featherweights, whom do you think you would have had a classic bout with in your prime?
It's always difficult to compare like for like. People forget that it's 20 years since I retired for good. But there are a couple of guys out there I'm really excited about. Keep an eye on a young lad called Chris John.

Do you think that David Haye will make good on his promise to reignite interest in the heavyweight division?
I certainly hope so. He's got the speed and the punching power, though he does lack the size and when he's in with the real giants he'll have to be in top shape not to exhaust himself just pushing them off. Haye's certainly got the charisma. It's just going to be a question of stamina.

What have you got coming up in the near future?

FIVE MINUTES WITH ... Barry McGuigan

Boxing's still my first love. I'm doing quite a lot of presenting and my days are always full, but I've recently moved into promoting. Myself and Barry Hearn are managing a kid from Coventry who's got a big future, and there are plenty of big fights on the horizon that I'll be commentating on. Then there's my son, who's turning a lot of heads and could go far in the sport.

As a professional boxer, Barry McGuigan won the British, European and World Titles. Now retired from the ring, he has been a leading boxing commentator, writer and trainer for the last 20 years.

The best medicine

Bolton's Dave Spikey is coming home with his latest stand-up tour, and he's out to prove that laughter is still the best medicine. CAROLINE DUTTON spoke to him.

IF you see Dave Spikey out and about on the streets, be careful to lower your voice – if not you might just end up the subject of one of his stand-up routines.

"I love earwigging," said Dave. "My wife calls me Mr Nosey. She says I have a radar for bizarre conversations, and she's right.

"Some of my favourite things are things I've overheard.

"The other day I was in the bar of the Hilton Hotel in Manchester and two girls were talking really loudly at the bar.

"One said, 'Our Doreen's had a baby boy' and the other one said 'What's it called?' She said 'Marc, with a C.' 'What?' the other one said, 'Cark?'"

"You can't make stuff like that up."

So don't be surprised if there's plenty of gags based around his ear-wigging when Dave Spikey brings his latest stand-up tour to Blackpool in May.

FUNNYBONE: Stand-up comedian Dave Spikey is just what the doctor ordered

The Best Medicine Tour — Repeat Prescription is the same tour he travelled around the UK with last year, back by popular demand.

"I'm milking the medical terminology aren't I?" joked Dave.

"The next one will be called 'Take three times a day!' But I named this tour Repeat Prescription because, essentially, it's very similar to the tour I did last year.

"It went brilliantly, but I wasn't really planning on doing any more shows.

"I'd done a DVD and 40-odd dates, but we got so much response — 60 theatres asked if we could bring it to them this year — that I've lined up another 30 gigs in spring and 30 in autumn.

"Every show I do changes throughout the tour because I'm always extending bits and adding new stories. Before I know it I've got an extra 15 minutes of material, so I have to go back through it and take out 15 minutes of other stuff to keep it at two hours. I'd say the show now is at least 30per cent different to last year."
